THE FRESHET.

Mr. Editor.—Your editorial remarks on the Freshet, so far as Bridge Street is concerned, are mainly incorrect. The "County Bridge" was not "carried away."

The bridge being in danger, the planking, stringers, and corbels were taken from the abutments to prevent their loss, as the loss of the bridge would prove a serious inconvenience to the village, as well as the travelling community. I at once telegraphed my foreman to replace it as soon as possible, which was attended to, and some three days after the ice had passed, the bridge was open for travel.

You state "a great part of the village flooded," I believe only the low grounds, which are usually flooded every year, were under water. Although for a few hours the water was higher than usual, particularly on the Kildare road.

As to the "damage done to the different mills and manufacturers," telegrams and letters received by me before leaving home, and since my arrival here, state the damage is confined to the abutments of the bridge and the great mill pier, a damage easily repaired, and at trifling cost, so that Bridge Street has (considering the heavy freshet) come off well.

No doubt your information was such as to lead you to believe in its truthfulness, and I am sure you will be pleased to learn that no serious damage was sustained by any one, and correct the misstatement made through wrong information.

Yours, &c.,
WILLIAM FLINT.
Ottawa, 26th March, 1868.

We are only too happy to comply with the above request, as it was our duty to do so. We may say, however, that in a conversation with the Editor, he was told that the bridge was not "carried away."

We can only believe that Mr. Flint took every means to save the bridge. No. 1000.

drunkenness and rowdiness only lead to one result, and when once launched on this road there is no telling how soon that result will be reached; but he would say to them just look

Port's Corner.

The Milling of the Snow.

BY FRANK FORTNEY.

I stood by the open window.

This beautiful spring like day.

And saw the western drifts of snow.

As under the sun they lay.

And heard with a thrill of gladness.

Down falling from the eaves.

The patter of the snow drops.

As they fell from the eaves.

And these are the best of the snow.

To think that his reign is done.

That his chilling reign is not long to last.

But must yield to the potent sun.

The song of beautiful birds.

The building of beautiful flowers.

The warning rays of the golden sun.

That gladden the spring-time hours.

And all that make her fair.

Were sung in this melody.

That autumn strange and rare.

All these and more did the glad drops sing.

And my heart kept time with the glad sun.

With the melting of the snow.

Port's Corner.
Thomas D'Arcy McGee.
IN MEMORIAM.
April 22, 1908.

A cloud has fallen on our happy land. Men tell the tale with hoarse lament. Sorrow and sympathy linked in hand. Have shrouded the ghastly specter of Death.

There is a fall within the busy mart. As though the city's pulse had ceased to beat. How have the streets of the nation's heart. And the life of the nation's heart.

They listened to him in the early morn. With pure delight, as he told the tale. How he had lived the nation's heart. And the life of the nation's heart.

The village dog his unassuming way. As he walked slowly through the moonlight, home. A sudden flash of light across the way. His life blood flowing on the cold hard stone.

Such was his end—out in the moonlight's glare. In the full strength of manhood's prime. He fell as he went on his way. That he had lived the nation's heart.

By constant tears and warnings unheeded. He fought the wicked passion to the end. And now the world's penalty has paid. Of being the nation's heart.

Weave him a chaplet now his work is done. He fell as he went on his way. He fell as he went on his way. That he had lived the nation's heart.

Free press, half price, knife, and death. And might and might in the end. And might and might in the end. That he had lived the nation's heart.

Death, justice, hell. Shall speak even in the end. And might and might in the end. That he had lived the nation's heart.

And freedom won a distant dream. And might and might in the end. That he had lived the nation's heart.

Be not for vengeance, but for the child. Which whistles like a wind on the true and just. For when he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield.

When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield.

When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield.

When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield.

When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield.

When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield.

When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield.

When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield. When he fell, justice had a sword to wield.

P. T. BARRON ON THE WITNESS STAND.
The case of Cook v. Barron has occupied the Court for the last ten days. Mr. George Cook, proprietor of the Yellow Mills, near P. T. Barron, in connection with a mill pond, by laying the foundation of an ice house on the shore, and as it is alleged, extending a portion of the foundation beyond high water, Mr. Cook's witnesses, Mr. Beckwith, the surveyor, testified that the amount of water thus displaced would have turned the water wheels of the mill for about three minutes, and Mr. Barron's witness, Mr. Mead, the surveyor, stated that it would not have turned the wheels quite three quarters of a minute.

Mr. Barron's defense was, first, that the land on which the ice-house was built was the property of his wife, "Charity," and therefore, Mr. Cook had used the wrong person; second, that Mr. Cook had no valid title to the pond, for various reasons; third, that he had been misled by the testimony of his wife's witnesses.

By constant tears and warnings unheeded. He fought the wicked passion to the end. And now the world's penalty has paid. Of being the nation's heart.

Weave him a chaplet now his work is done. He fell as he went on his way. He fell as he went on his way. That he had lived the nation's heart.

Free press, half price, knife, and death. And might and might in the end. And might and might in the end. That he had lived the nation's heart.

Death, justice, hell. Shall speak even in the end. And might and might in the end. That he had lived the nation's heart.

THE SITUATION IN BRITAIN.
(From N.Y. Telegram.)
The question on which the Ministry has broken down is that of the Irish Church. To the extraordinary condition of the Irish Church in Ireland we have had frequent occasion to refer. The Episcopalians are but a very small part of the population of that country—a mere fraction of the population. Yet there is the whole of the public attention as never before, maintaining churches and rectors in places where there is not a single Protestant. This state of things is a gross abuse, and ought to come to an end. But there were so many interests involved—so many decayed ministers were living comfortably on these sinecures—so many bays and owls had made their nests in the system, that any attempt to touch the system threatened to bring them all to the ground. Hence the proposal was always received with a fierce outcry, and the Reformers were obliged to desist.

There is one other outcrop of Fenianism, not formidable to the Government, but showing the deepest hatred of the people, made English statesmen feel at last that something must be done for Ireland, or it would remain for ever a state of chronic discontent—a source of weakness rather than strength to the empire. True, things were no worse than they had been for hundreds of years, but the danger had been forced on the public attention as never before. Besides—to tell the whole truth—English politicians are pretty much like ours, ready to seize upon anything for the advantage of their party, and to get themselves into a bad position.

Mr. Barron—Without charity I was nothing in those days of Jerome clocks. Counsel—Mr. Barron, you are now worth a million of dollars. Mr. Barron—(gravelly)—I am glad to hear it.

Counsel—Are you not worth it? Mr. Barron—You so inform me, Sir. Counsel—You are worth a million and a half.

Mr. Barron—Better yet. Counsel—Is not this true? Mr. Barron—I shall tell you if the Court so directs.

Judge—What is the object of the inquiry? Counsel—I wish to know how he has made $1,000,000 in a few years. Mr. Barron—I am not aware that I am obliged to give the gentleman I am now getting.

Counsel—to the Judge—Shall not the witness answer my questions? Judge—Mr. Barron may do as he likes about it. If he has no objection to tell you how he has made his money, let him.

Mr. Barron—(taking a pencil and a large sheet of law paper)—I certainly have not the slightest objection (commencing to make figures rapidly) but it will involve my means in the past, and I am not prepared to do so.

Undaunted, he returned to the attack. "What is it, then the Gorilla, the Mermaid, and enter into some pretty nice calculations regarding the net proceeds of the Woolley Horse. I shall also be compelled to state to an estimate of the Museum, and in the course of about five days we shall probably begin to get some faint rays of light on the subject."

The Court informed the witness that the answer might be waived.

A DEATH DISCOVERY.—There died in Coventry a few days since, an elderly unmarried man named Palmer—his death being a surprise, as he had been in the habit of writing to his family, and he was not expected to die so soon.

Mr. George W. George, of Cincinnati, committed suicide at the Bates House, Indianapolis, on Tuesday night, by shooting himself in the head with a revolver. The bullet entered his brain, and he died in a few minutes.

The Fire Reserve Fund is now $47,464. The Life Reserve Fund is now $9,282,468. The Company is represented throughout Ontario and Quebec, by influential Agents, to whom application for insurance may be made.

DEMONSTRATION IN HONOR OF MR. MCGEE.
The honor done to the memory of the late Hon. T. D. McGee was, in many respects, not only unusual but unique. Never before did our whole business population make a voluntary holiday in one of the roughest seasons of the year. Merchants only intended to give a half holiday, when they returned to their places of business in the afternoon, found them closed, and retail stores, for the most part, continued the day. Everything indicated a disposition to devote the day to respect for the dead.

The very unusual circumstance of the military turning out to a civilian's funeral showed that the people were not only respectful to Mr. McGee's services in bringing about Confederation and maintaining a feeling of loyalty for the British connection. We do not intend to do anything of the kind, but we do intend to do something of the kind.

The morning's high wind, however, was not so favorable. The troops were out from about half-past seven till half-past three, standing still with only one change of place, and Mr. McGee's services in bringing about Confederation and maintaining a feeling of loyalty for the British connection. We do not intend to do anything of the kind, but we do intend to do something of the kind.

The Assassination of Mr. McGee.
Ottawa, April 11.—Further evidence against Whalen was disclosed today by the house adjoining McKenna's (nearly opposite Mr. Trotter's) has been for a long time unoccupied; that the door and the back door were locked, and that in the back door steps two tracks and two only could be traced. They were those of a man who entered and left the house by the back door. Both boots corresponded precisely on being measured, and Whalen's boots having been procured from the boot found to correspond to the tracks.

When asked for his boots this morning, Whalen sighed and was evidently upset, but said he was not the boots he was wearing on the night of McGee's murder. If Whalen could not produce his boots, then the boots found in the house were those of the assassin. Whalen was immediately arrested after the debate on Monday night.

Three men were arrested to-day on suspicion, but there is little against them. They are, I believe, deserters from the army. There have been a number of strange suspicious looking persons about the population of the city this week. They are under the surveillance of the authorities. The Times gives the following particulars about these three prisoners. Their names are William Jones, who was discharged ten years ago after having served ten years in the 25th Regiment, Madras Infantry, and the 25th Regiment, Madras Infantry, and the 25th Regiment, Madras Infantry.

I was ever appointed in the manner I stated in the communication referred to the Secretary—who is usually considered an important officer in any Society. I have no authority to give him the right to allow the Mover to flow because this one is explained of." Now it does not suit the Member to inform the public that the dominant party wish to shake the relations of the Society sending the letter to a Committee in Toronto to dis-

The practice was to discuss the matter in which the present Bill is embodied by the clique complained of, and to submit to which this Bill is now presented, not speaking it could be observed that no objection was made to the mode of his appointment, and that the feelings of the rest of the Committee were assured that this Member in the personage who on a recent occasion had been expelled from the House, had thereby escaped the congratulations which he had been entitled to receive. The following questions, namely:—
1. That the Bill was introduced 18 months ago, with the request that a seat be labor in the Gold Region.
2. That the Bill was introduced with the assistance of some of the same persons as of something that has been done.

FENIAN UNIFORM.

To the Editor of the Chronicle.

SIR—A writer in the Intelligencer the name of "Vigilance," states that the impertinent scoundrel had the honor to appear at a Skating Carnival last winter a year ago. "Cressed" (i. e. a Fenian uniform). "Cressed" does very little credit to the writer in not having the scoundrel rebuked for his misconduct in so public a manner. In answer to that the backbone of a question is the sturdy backs of "Robin Hood" merry men, has always been his remembrance by England's most famous. By making enquiries of the Secretary of the Fenian Society, we can find out who appeared in the name, and he can then decide whether he deserves to die the death of every

THE MCGEE INVESTIGATION

Ottawa

The examination of the case of James Whelan, who is now charged with the murder of M. J. O'Sullivan, resumed this morning in the court.

Whelan was brought in under guard of the Rifle Brigade and was taken to the dock in with drawn bayonets, and he was taken to the dock. He looked up and stepped forward as if he were about to speak, but as soon as he had taken a few steps he immediately lost his wonderful courage, and turned as pale as paper. He made a determined effort to resist, but he was overpowered, and with a set grimace, and pressed teeth, he soon bowed his head, and looked round at the spectators with a quite cool and self-possession.

many of his acquaintances did not seemingly recognize him. He will only remark that as he came up to the stand to be sworn in, he eagerly looked over the docket and appeared to be concerned. The Ottawa Hotel waiter, a young man who gave him a remarkable clearness and intelligence, was remarkably nervous at his interesting evidence, so many thought that Mr. McWhinney was planning a "sheben" or a "sheben" expression, especially when Turnbull's expressions Whelan had used with the Fenians and McWhinney laughed right out. He was in clothes he was arrested in, made remarkable efforts he made to keep them with compressed teeth to maintain his composure.

The investigation

The investigation in the case was resumed this morning with closed doors. Mr. O'Reilly, on instructions from Sir John A. M., excluded every one from the courtroom except the prisoner and his counsel. The prisoner was handcuffed by the detectives and a guard being dispensed with, the Crown counsel and counsel for the prisoner, with a few policemen,
